

Department of Nutrition-Required Courses for 2013 Admitted Doctoral Students

Subject	Credit	First Year		Second Year		Remarks
		Sem1	Sem2	Sem1	Sem2
Applied Chinese and western medical nutrition	2	2
Advanced nutrition	2	2
Seminar(I)	1	1				Taught in English
Advanced nutrition	2		2
Applied statistics	2		2			Master's students can take this course.
Seminar(II)	1		1			Taught in English
Seminar(III)	1			1		Taught in English
Seminar(IV)	1				1	Taught in English
Ph.D. Dissertation	12				12
Total credits	24	5	5	1	13

Annotation from school

1. Students need to pass English ability examination before graduating.
2. This credit table will be considered as the confirmation for the credits of graduation.

Annotation from nutrition department

1. The goal of our Ph.D. program is to provide graduate students with solid training to become independent researchers in the areas of nutrition science, clinical nutrition, public health, and food science, with the application of Chinese and Western medicines.
2. These regulations are applicable for 2013 admitted doctoral students. It's a two-year to seven-year course. Minimum credits: 40, including required courses (12), elective courses (16) and Ph.D. Dissertation(12).

Department of Nutrition-Elective Courses for 2013 Admitted Doctoral Students

Subject	Credit	First Year		Second Year		Remarks
		Sem1	Sem2	Sem1	Sem2
Advanced nutritional epidemiology	2	2
Advanced sensory evaluation	3	3
Advanced food science	2	2
Writing scientific paper	2		2
Advanced functional foods	2		2
Advanced food chemistry	2			2
Advanced lipid research	2			2
Cancer & metabolism	2			2
Grant proposal writing	2				2
Advanced clinical nutrition	2				2
Advanced nutrition and cardiovascular disease	2				2
Herbs dietetics and neurodegenerative diseases	2				2
Total credits	25	7	4	6	8

Annotation from school

1. Students need to pass English ability examination before graduating.
2. This credit table will be considered as the confirmation for the credits of graduation.

Annotation from nutrition department

1. The goal of our Ph.D. program is to provide graduate students with solid training to become independent researchers in the areas of nutrition science, clinical nutrition, public health, and food science, with the application of Chinese and Western medicines.
2. These regulations are applicable for 2013 admitted doctoral students. It's a two-year to seven-year course. Minimum credits: 40, including required courses (12), elective courses (16) and Ph.D. Dissertation(12).